Introduction

The Deanship of Scientific Research realizes that publishing in international databases raises the image of a university in the field of research since the rules and requirements imposed by these databases often stimulate researchers to improve the quality of their research as well as the originality and accuracy of its content. At the same time, the Deanship is also well aware of the many challenges faced by researchers when aiming for such journals, including lengthy correspondence and the publishing fees. For this reason, the Deanship has started the Research Leadership Program, a program that aims at encouraging researchers to target high-ranking journals for their prospective research.

Program Goal

This program aims at supporting researchers by helping them overcome some of the material and technical challenges related to publishing in high-ranking journals. This is done by providing financial support to the researchers to be used in such research-related costs as proofreading or publication fees.
